Making a difference
that will last a lifetime:
leaving a Bequest to Respect

New research has suggested that the number of people over 65 is expected to grow by more than 50% in the next 20 years, implying the huge need for adequate aged care.

A foundation of Philanthropy

Community generosity has been the foundation of Respect Group Limited (Respect) and philanthropy continues today. Respect's oldest home opened in 1922, and over the years all our sites have been supported by the kindness and generosity of donors.

A gift for the future

Due to the increase in the ageing population, residential aged care is a vastly underrated challenge in the care of older Australians. The need for specialised and secure care continues to grow. Respect's residential aged care homes offer trusted, personalised care without sacrificing the independence of our residents. We strive to have every resident live life to the fullest, safely and happily.

Perhaps a Respect aged care facility has enriched your life or touched the life of a relative or friend during their time of need? A planned gift to Respect in your Will is a lasting testimony to Respect care.

Why Bequests are so Important.

Leaving a bequest to a not-for-profit organisation like Respect is one of the most generous decisions you can make in your lifetime. It offers you the opportunity to keep supporting issues that you believe are important to the aged care community.

There are a variety of ways to leave a bequest in your Will to Respect. We recommend you consult a legal advisor, such as a solicitor, or utilise a digital Will service such as Willed to ensure your Will is valid according to the laws in your State or Territory (please see our website respect.com.au/donations-and-bequests/ for more details).

Every bequest creates a legacy that will help the aged care sector improve residential care and create long-term change in the lives of residents and their families.

About Respect Aged Care

As a proud not-for-profit organisation since 1922, Respect serves the senior community through our high standard of care and community. Our name may have changed over time, but the commitment to our residents' wellbeing is as strong as ever.

Our focus is on giving back to seniors by fostering communities of belonging across the country. Headquartered in the northwest coast of Tasmania, our philosophy remains: everyone deserves the right to a life well-lived, with dignity and respect.

Respect, first and foremost, believes in honouring the countless hours, hard work, volunteerism, entrepreneurship, and funding provided by the thousands of people who dreamt of, created, and grew our aged care homes for the benefit of their communities.

As a not-for-profit organisation, we recognise we are temporary custodians of our homes. We are fortunate to operate them in our communities, and without the hard work of many before us, Respect would not be in the privileged position it is to care for so many elderly people in our communities. It is now our task to take their aged care homes forward, ensuring that we honour what has been built before us.
